Protecting stray and feral cats and dogs
Promoting neutering programmes overseas

The crush cage, so very kindly donated to the Ikaria Volunteer Group, has proved invaluable with our neutering programmes. I can't understand how vets manage without this cage, especially with feral cats.

"The cat trap we received from SNIP International has been used to save the cats on the University campus from being poisoned, and the project to convince the authorities to take a more humane approach"

"We're very grateful for your kind donation. We were able to start the TNR program earlier (and neuter 39 cats)."

Associação Projecto Animais de Barcelos Portugal

SNIP International is the only UK-based animal welfare organisation specifically dedicated to promoting the neutering of stray and feral cats and dogs on a world-wide basis.

All over the world there are colonies of free-living (stray or feral) cats and dogs, breeding to the limits of available food and shelter. In tourist areas the numbers of animals grow faster, due to the additional supplies of food provided by well-meaning visitors.

Then the tourists go home and the animals become vulnerable to starvation, disease, suffering and death. Local authorities and individuals may try to reduce the numbers by poisoning.

But there is a better way. Cats can be trapped and dogs caught by volunteers or municipal employees, then checked over, vaccinated and neutered by veterinarians. The animals are identified so they are not taken a second time.

Young animals and tame adults can be adopted into good homes. Healthy adults, too wild to be adopted, can be returned to their familiar habitat under the longterm care of volunteers. The emphasis is on sustainable programmes.

The word is spreading

Animal welfare groups focused on neutering programmes are springing up in many countries. SNIP International supports these groups by

- building links with animal welfare groups overseas which need advice and encouragement
- donating specialist equipment for use in trap-neuter-return programmes for stray and feral cats, and comparable programmes for dogs, and giving advice on its use. Distribution is via the International Companion Animal Welfare Conferences, training programmes organised by DogsTrust in the UK, and delivery to UK and overseas addresses
- dealing with enquiries from animal welfare groups, local residents and visitors all over the world.

Rabies is pretty common in Kathmandu and the KAT Centre replies to almost all of the city's calls about rabid dogs, so the gloves (SNIP International gave) are important to keep our staff safe.
